Thinking Out Loud

By H. M. L.

Harry Hopkins, administrator of the Lease-Lend operations is out with a 44 page report on 90 days of progress (?). When its all boiled down it reveals that in that time the British and other democracies fighting for their lives, have received $10,729,684 worth of actual commodities from the U. S. A. of which $7,988,261 were agricultural products. This, out of the 7 billion dollar appropriation. Hopkins proves to be as useful in his new job as he has always been in other jobs. He functions much as would a wart upon the President's nose. In the war effort this country is making he is not only worth nothing, but he fills the place of some man who might get results. It is fortunate for the New Deal that Hopkins is half an invalid. His physique is always an alibi.

Actually the country's defense effort has been slowed up. The production of planes in May, for instance, was less than in April. Yet from all the mouth pieces of hundreds of government agencies that spill a constantly growing stream of publicity into the editorial rooms of the country, one would almost believe that American production already had the Germans licked and crying for mercy.

The "paper work" required to get an order through from the British commanding officer in Egypt to the manufacturer in the United States requires 70 British signatures in London, and 20 in this country. These signatures require four months to be affixed, and the manufacturer requires two weeks to get out the goods for delivery. By this account it would seem that British red tape is more than three times as long as that of the United States. Hopkins, so far as his report shows, has done nothing to shorten the red tape route though invested with powers second only to the President.

We have heard a lot about labor organizations purging themselves of communists. Half hearted attemps have been made to do so. Occasionallly some turbulent radical has had his wrist gently slapped by his superior in Washington. But why should labor do any purging so long as the New Deal keeps known communists on its payrolls in Washington. Out of many we mention two flagrant cases. We quote recent dispatches:

"David Lasser, former president of the Workers' Alliance, several months ago was placed on the WPA payroll at $4,400 a year. Lasser is notorious for his communistic sympathies. The Dies Committee has shown his Workers' Alliance was inspired in Moscow. He, himself, on expenses taken from the dues relief workers paid out of their measley allowances, several years ago journeyed to Moscow by special invitation to attend a celebration of the Red Revolution. He has been a particularly annoying agitator. Yet this man, instead of being blacklisted by the government, is placed on the payrol at $4,400 a year while Western Democrats complain bitterly to Ed Flynn that they cannot get jobs for the party faithful.

"What is worse, the Lasser appointment was stoutly defended by Howard Hunter, WPA Administrator, who refused to fire him in response to criticisms in Congress. In order to get Lasser off the payroll the House voted 131 to 88 that no part of the WPA appropriation could be used to pay his salary. Whether the senate will concur remains to be seen."

"The second case we have in mind is that of Bernard Ades, who in 1934 was the communist candidate for governor of Maryland. Quite by accident a Maryland congressman discovered him on the payroll of the United States Housing Administration at a salary of $3,200 a year. Certainly it was clear this man was a communist. The only action that has been taken so far is a request by the USHA chief for an investigation by the Justice Department. Meanwhile Ades has not even been suspended.

Yet the New Deal, carrying water on both shoulders, rails at labor leaders who fail to purge their ranks of communists! And no wonder defense production falters and wobbles with these pernicious termites busy within the government itself.

The ceremony was performed by Father William Horgan. The bride was attended by Miss Georgia Glennon of Sacramento, formerly of this city, and Curtis Clark of Nevada City acted as the best man.

Second Registration Under Selective Service Will Be Held Tomorrow

In Nevada City and throughout the county, state and nation, all men, aliens as well as citizens, who have attained the age of 21 since last October 16th are required to register under the Selective Service Act tomorrow.

On the eve of the second R-day in less than a year, the prediction came from Washington that a reatively high percentage of the 750,000 young men to be registered for military service tomorrow may be inducted into the army within the next few months.

In Nevada City, Merle Morrison of the Nevada County Selective Service Board will handle the registration in his headquarters at the courthouse, second floor.

SUPERVISORS WILL MEET

The Nevada County Board of Supervisors will convene here tomorrow in regular session. One of the matters of importance to be considered will be the handling of the relief, which has been shouldered onto the counties as a result of the legislature's neglect to appropriate SRA funds before adjourning recently.

Local Woman Settles Problem of Summer Heat In Kitchen

Avoiding the summer heat in a small kitchen has proved an easy problem for Mrs. Jack Cranfield of Nevada City.

With great foresight, Mrs. Cranfield has made a temporary kitchen beneath her unfinished home; here, on a wood-burning range, she cooks with all the pleasure of natural air-conditioning.

When the house is completed the temporary kitchen will become part of the basement.

AGED URGED TO WAIT PATIENTLY FOR JULY CASH

An appeal to all recipients of old age security and state aid to the blind not to flood county welfare departments with inquiries regarding the status of their cases was issued today by Martha A. Chickering, director of the state department of social welfare.

"California county welfare departments will be working strenuously during the next two weeks in order to insure July payments to all recipients in the amounts for which they are eligible under the new law," according to Miss Chickering.

The counties must review individually the entire 162,000 aged and blind cases in the state and possible adjustments appear likely for 45,000 recipients who have income or own homes. It was pointed out that the more inquiries received by the county welfare department the less time will be available to work on each case.

Despite five months of struggling with the federal officials on the part of the legislature, the governor and the social welfare board, the federal social security board insisted California's laws be tightened. California finally gave in when withdrawal of federal funds on July 1 seemed certain unless this state complied with the federal demands, California thought to retain the liberal income provisions of its former laws.

A separate program has been set up by the legislature to care for those needy blind persons who submit actual working plans of rehabilitation. This special class of recipients will be allowed to retain outside income not in excess of $400 per year without their aid grants being affected.

DOWNIEVILLE PREPARING TO CELEBRATE 4TH

DOWNIEVILLE, June 30.—The Fourth of July celebration is rapidly making progress toward rounding out to be one of the best celebrations held in this section since the big event in 1933. Entries for floats are coming in from all sections of the county with nearly 30 being entered at the present time. Those in charge have profited by the mistakes made last year and a program has been difinitely outlined taking care of the people who wil visit Downieville during the 4th holidays.

The Loyalton school band will lend color to the affair and a bandstand is being built for the occasion.

Eleon O. Carvin the boy who is always strong behind the Forest Homecoming will be the master of ceremonies for the affair here this year and it is understood that he will be appropriately dressed for the affair.

Decorations for the town are to be started next Thursday. A number of trophies are being purchased by the committee in charge and instead of money prizes and the trophies will be offered.

Willow Valley Youth Develops Bone Grinder

By MIRIAM CRANDALL

Fifteen year old George Nelson of Willow Valley has developed a bone-grinding machine as the latest invention of his ingenious mind.

Finding steam pressure from 25 gallons of water, heated in a 50 gallon oil drum, insufficient to turn the wheels of his device, young George turned to water power which worked quite successfully.

The product of the machine, pulverized bone, is used for chicken feed.

According to George, the steam generating contrivance while impractical for wheel-turning power, is quite successful as a "midget" car-washing machine.

George, who will be a sophomore in the local high school next fall, does gardening at home and earns his spending money by doing odd jobs about the yards of friends and acquaintances in Nevada City.

Young Nelson's inventions are reminiscent of another boy who started life in much the same manner. That boy grew to become the man—Thomas A. Edison.

Many Nevada City Float Entries For Fourth Fete Parade In G. V. Friday

THIS COMMUNITY COOPERATING WHOLE-HEARTEDLY IN PLANS FOR JULY FOURTH CELEBRATION

Nevada City is wholeheartedly cooperating with Grass Valley in the July Fourth celebration Friday and besides entering many floats in the parade, this city plans to attend the celebration practically en masse.

George Gildersleeve, chairman of the local Chamber of Commerce's committee assisting the Grass Valley committee in the event, said the majority of civic and fraternal organizations here are busily engaged in preparing floats for the patriotic parade at 10 o'clock on the morning of the Fourth.

The Fourth fete is alternated each year between Nevada City and Grass Valley.

Inasmuch as most of the mines will operate on Saturday, the celebration will be confined to one day.

The first main event on the program will be the parade. The Nevada City band will be in the parade as well as the local Native Daughters drill team. Many local veterans will march with VFW, American Legion and Canadian Legion.

Sports events will continue all afternoon, climaxed by a water fight between the fire department at 4:30 p. m.

At 7:30 o'clock in the evening patriotic exercises and a concert will be held at Memorial Park. Bob Bryan, brilliant Grass Valley High School graduate, who won a scholarship to the University of Chicago, will be the speaker.

The celebration will end with a fireworks display at Memorial Park at 8 o'clock.

Local Man's Brother And Nephew Die In Yuba Mine Tragedy

Phil Buhl of this city attended the funeral today in Marysville for his brother, Charles Buhl, prominent Browns Valley rancher, and his nephew, Wilburn Silva, 16, who died last Friday of carbon monoxide fumes after collapsing at the bottom of a water well on the Buhl ranch.

Double funeral rites were held for the two monoxide fumes victims.

Young Silva died en route to a hospital of deadly gas poisoning received when he descended into the deep well in an heroic effort to rescue the older man. Buhl, attempting to clean out the well following a small cavein, collapsed when exhaust fumes from a small gasoline engined pump he was using on the job exhausted air in the deep pit.

Nearly a year ago a similar incident claimed the life of a man at Town Talk.

The Miners finished the first half season with five victories and five defeats.

Intruder At Cabin Sets Fire Either Accidentally Or Deliberately

The cabin home of George F. Shaw on the Lava Cap Road was burned to the ground Saturday night.

The state division of forestry fire fighting crew confined the blaze to the one building.

The owner reported to Fire Warden William F. Sharpe that apparently an intruder to his cabin home was responsible for the fire. He said the lock on the door was broken and that either the intruder deliberately or accidentally set the cabin on fire. Damage was $250.

The forestry crew this afternoon answered a call to Camp Minaluta. Upon their arrival they found a small fir ehad been extinguished with the camp fire fighting equipment.

PREPAREDNESS FIRST

Elaborate plans or the formation of a statewide aircraft spotting service to guard California's vital defense industries from a surprise attack were announced yesterday and the project was designated as the first major task confronting the new state defense council.

The aircraft warning service, like other projects with which the state's defense planners have concerned themselves, has drawn many jeers and snickers from the "It-Can't-Happen-Here" boys, who think the notion that enemy bombers some day may fly over California is utterly silly.

Imagine how inane it would be, they say, to have an army of 50,000 hard at work today, scanning the skies for any enemy aircraft that might be approaching.

We can agree with those scoffers to this extent. It can't happen here today.

But it could tomorrow, and on the remote chance that it will, it is imperative that we not waste another minute in preparing for it.

The idea behind the civilian defense plans that are being worked out here and elsewhere in the nation is basically sound. It involves the fundamental principle of being prepared for anything the enemy might throw at you, not just what you think he's most likely to throw.

And if war ever should come to California on the wings of a conquering luftwaffe, our chances of successfully defending ourselves would be so very much better if we only had the machinery for civilian defense set up.

It is simply to get this machinery set up that the new state defense council has been organized. Its job is a vital one, and those who sit by in thumb-twiddling apathy and scoff at its work, are unwittingly playing the game of Hitler.

If the leaders of our state or nation are over-cautious there will be no just cause for censure, but if they were under cautious, they could bring down disaster on every one of us.

NAZI WALKING PAPERS

By the 10th of July the two German consular establishments in California and the 22 others throughout the nation will have locked their doors by presidential order, and because of "activities inimical to the welfare of this country," their Nazi staffs will have vanished this scene.

Also in accordance with presidential command, attaches of the German Library of Information, German Railway and Tourist Bureau and German Transocean News Agency will have stacked their tools and left for the Fatherland.

Most phases of international diplomacy are pretty much a closed book to the American layman, but even the dullest of us is aware that the establishments mentioned in the polite closing notice signed by Sumner Welles, were deeply engaged in the most important work of the German Reich abroad —Nazi propaganda.

Will that situation be remedied after the comparative handful of leaders are shipped home to Hitler? Or, with no admitted concentration points for Neza subversivism, will the United States find itself confronted with the dilemma of the average town that virtuously locks up its isolated vice districts—only to find vice breaking out like a rash in every neighborhood of the community?

Certainly there will be Bund members and Nazi sympathizers striving to continue to plant Hitler idiologies, to prevent American aid to German foes, to keep the Goebbels propaganda ball rolling. American agencies will need to be all the more alert, all the more wacthful of the broadened base of the axis machine.

Yellowstone National Park (No. 2).

Although William H. Jackson wasn't the first white man to see Yellowstone, the preservation of its wonders is largely due to his efforts as a photographer.

Discovered in 1809, stories of this fantastic region went out to a doubting world at 10, 20 and 30 year intervals. In 1871 Jackson came in with the cumbersome camera equipment of that era.

He was a young man of 28 then. He is 98 now and still going strong. Last year he marched with the G. A. R. in its annual New York parade, hale and hearty. He has photographed, sketched and painted the remote corners of the world during his long and colorful career. He invented the picture post card during the Civil War, when he sent friends post-cards bearing his sketches of battle scenes and military life.

Enlargements were unknown in 1870 and the largest pictures Jackson could take were with old-fashioned 11x14 inch wet plates, which he washed in the bubbling springs and pools he photographed. He later used an awkward 20 24 inch camera to obtain pictures of mighty Old Faithful and other geysers, described last week.

He was particularly impressed by Jupiter Terrace, a vast system of colorful steps on the side of a mountain that is slowly turning itself inside out. Boiling water, bearing lime in solution from beds of 1200 to 1500 feet below, have been piling up these shimmering terraces for countless centuries at the rate of one foot a year.

He photographed the awsome Dragon's Mouth, belching water and steam and roaring loud enough to be heard for miles. More quiet now it still makes an awful racket as its triangular greenish mouth offers escape for pent up heat and water from far below.

Jackson shot scenes of the bubbling Paint Pots, pink, white, red, black and white masses of squirming, jetting mud. He took pictures of 7,731 feet high Yellowstone Lake whose 139 square mile surface makes it the largest body of water in North America at so great an altitude. Visitors today are allowed to catch, every day and without a license 5 of the lake's odd, Cut-throat Trout, so named because of its peculiar red markings.

The giant Yellowstone Falls was photographed as it tumbled 308 ft.—twice the drop of Niagra Falls—into Yellowstone Canyon, 750 feet deep, twice as broad and splashed with every color of the rainbow.

Jackson would have startled the world even more if his film had been of the modern color type when he photographed Sunset Lake, whose rising vapors reflect the orange-red coloring that billions of tiny algae give to the water. Likewise, pictures of Morning Glory Pool—a broad and beautiful replica of the flower it is named after—would have been almost unbelievable in color.

When Congress saw Jackson's photographs it quickly set Yellowstone aside as the world's first National Park. Toda its 3,472 square miles of varied and beautiful scenery make it our nation's largest National Park. Today its 3,472 square as it was when Jackson's cameras first captured its magnificence.

J. C. ELECTRON TELESCOPE TO COST $14,500

BERKELEY, June 30.—The University of California will have in operation, possibly within a year, the latest type electron microscope, an instrument capable of magnifying objects 50 to 100 times smaller than can be seen with the most powerful light microscope.

The instrument will be one of the first of its type on the Pacific Coast. Purchase of the instrument is being made possible in part by a grant of $2500 from the Shell Development Company of Emeryville. The university will contribute $5000, while the remainder of the $9500 cost of the instrument will come from other sources.

The electron microscope ordered by the university is one made for general use by the Radio Corporation of America. It is capable of magnifying objects to 35,000 times their original size. The most powerful light microscopes are capable of magnifying objects only 2000 times.

Electron microscopes have the advantage of using high velocity electrons, atomic particles in place of light rays. These electrons have great penetrating power, and thus increase the range of the instrument. Ordinary microscopes can only magnify objects upon which light can be thrown.

Pictures of such minute objects as molecules and tuberculosis bacilli, formerly invisible to science, have been taken with the electron microscope, which is one of science's newest tools.

The University of California electron microscope will be available for use by a number of departments of the University. It will be administered by the Committee on Research, under the chairmanship of Dr. A. R. Davis, professor of plant physiology.
